Throughout his long
career, Jacques Derrida
had a close,
collaborative
relationship with Critical Inquiry and its editors. He saved some of his most important

essays for the journal, and he relished the

ensuing arguments and

polemics that stemmed

from the responses to his writing that Critical

Inquiry encouraged.

introduction to the philosopher and the evolution of his thought. These essays define three significant “periods” in Derrida’s writing: his early, seemingly revolutionary phase; a middle stage, often autobiographical, that included spirited defense of his work; and his late period, when his persona as a public

prominent, and he wrote on topics such as animals and religion.

The first period is represented by essays like “The Law of

Derrida produces a kind of phenomenological narratology. Another

essay, “The Linguistic

Circle of Geneva,”

embodies the second,

presenting deconstructionism at its best: Derrida shows that what was imagined to be an epistemological break in the study of linguistics was actually a repetition of earlier concepts. The final period of Derrida's writing includes the

essays "Of Spirit" and
"The Animal That

to Follow),” and three eulogies to the intellectual legacies of Michel Foucault, Louis Marin, and Emmanuel Lévinas, in which Derrida uses the ideas of each thinker to push forward the implications of their theories.
