You've gotten used to managing a diverse workforce. You deal with vendors across the globe. You see people as people, whether they're Chinese, Indian, Mexican, or American. You know the basic protocols to follow and the taboos to avoid. Still, when you arrive in another country or sit down to negotiate with someone from a different culture, you feel anxious and awkward, and often wind up saying or doing something wrong. You're not alone. Seventy percent of international ventures fail because of cultural differences. Do you need to speak multiple languages and have a Ph.D. in international relations to succeed in these global times? The reassuring reality is that you don't need to master all the norms and nuances of the myriad of cultures you encounter. What you need is CQ. That's short for Cultural Intelligence, a new set of skills and sensitivities that picks up where EQ leaves off. Strategy. What information do you need to map out a successful cross-cultural plan? What assumptions do you need to check? Action. What communication style and behaviors should you adapt for this intercultural interaction? At every step, you'll find helpful summaries and best practices. You'll also gain valuable insights into common situations, from eating unfamiliar local delicacies to apologizing, through the stories of frequent cross-cultural travelers. The Napoleon Hill Foundation In order to achieve desired results a simple two-step process must be followed: Thought + Action = Success As a student of Dr. Napoleon Hill for many years, I know that his philosophy works best when it is observable and measurable. It is not always easy to take action, but without action there is no success. Reflect on this for a moment. Great intentions never measure up to the smallest action. However, the tiniest action begins to build a momentum that culminates in your desired success if you build on the previous action daily. 10 Success Secrets pairs Dr. Hill's philosophy with actions that will move you toward success. I suggest that you try a few, keep a log, and watch your success rate grow. Without the action step, you are missing the master key to your dreams. First, chart your course; next, plan your method of travel, and third, step into the journey and begin! As you progress, you can then evaluate what actions work best for you. Look at this book as your treasure map. When you follow it to your destination, you will be rewarded with finding the treasure you seek. To your ultimate and lasting success! —Judith Williamson, Director, Napoleon Hill World Learning Center, Purdue University Calumet
